

TEMPOROMANDIBULAR DISORDERS (TMD)

2008 – GRADUATE COURSE DEN1017S

The developmental and functional characteristics of the temporomandibular joint offer the clinical dental specialist many challenges. Its functional integrity is vulnerable to musculoskeletal disorders as well as occlusion-related disorders, which demand an in-depth integration of basic and clinical science skills both at the diagnostic and at the therapeutic level. This course reviews many facets of TMJ function and dysfunction. It is presented in seminar form with emphasis on literature reviews, case history presentations and participation by various dental and medical specialists.

Tuesdays 11:00 to 13:00. room 360

Course Coordinator: Dr. Asbjorn Jokstad, 416 979-4930 ext. 4427
